Mac OS X 10.5 Leopard removed the ability to set 256 color mode manually using the built-in preferences pane, but the feature is now available here in Display Maestro!.. This is done by ignoring the operating system setting of hiding potentially unsafe resolutions.. It is ideal for running legacy games which require 256-color mode and do not automatically switch the screen depth for you.

Display Maestro gives you full control over attached displays, allowing the usage of all available resolutions and bit depths.
